Introduction

Here is a fun classroom language game to help students practice or review commands and phrases used in class.

Procedure

Divide the students into groups of four.

Give each group a set of action cards, a set of 'What do you say?' cards, and a dice. Ask the students to shuffle each set of cards separately and place them face down on the table in two piles. Each group will also need a timer or stopwatch.

Explain that the action cards contain classroom commands used by a teacher and the 'What do you say?' cards contain classroom language used by a student.

Next, split each group into two teams of two. Teams then take it in turns to roll the dice. If a team rolls an odd number (1, 3, 5), one student in the team picks up an action card, making sure not to show it to their teammate.

The student mimes the classroom command on the card to their teammate who has 30 seconds to say the command. If the student is successful, the team wins and keeps the card. If not, the other team has one chance to guess and win the card.

If a team rolls an even number (2, 4, 6), one student in the team picks up a 'What do you say?' card and reads the classroom situation written at the top of the card to their teammate who has 30 seconds to say the corresponding classroom language shown on the card.

If the student says the correct classroom language, the team wins and keeps the card. If not, the other team tries to guess the answer.

For both scenarios, if neither team manages to say the correct language, the card is removed from the game.

The game continues until all the cards have been used. If one type of card runs out, the teams stop rolling the dice and continue playing with just the remaining card type.

The team with the most cards at the end of the game wins.

Afterwards, review the classroom language on cards that were discarded with the class.
